"Part of the hard work of this group will be to closely examine various ways to approach public safety and figure out what approaches might work best for our community. Starting out, there are no foregone conclusions about what is best. The goal of the group is to "increase the safety of all Bloomington community members, especially those often marginalized due to race, disability, gender, sexual identity, or sexual orientation" through data-driven research about improving public safety by means other than traditional policing."

"According to Ordinance 20-20, the CAPS Commission serves as an advisory body to the Bloomington Common Council and shall:

 - Gather data about perceptions and preferences regarding public safety, specifically from groups of individuals that do not fall into the majority racial and economically advantaged demographics, as well as marginalized populations, of Bloomington.

- Research evidence-based approaches to public safety other than traditional policing, including but not limited to the establishment of an alternate crisis response phone number, investments in mental health care, addiction treatment, community centers, or job training (among other areas) to mitigate the causes of crime, and other innovative approaches.
- Explore best practices in socially and racially just public safety measures in cities across the US and worldwide, and to examine which ideas may best be implemented in Bloomington.
- Make recommendations to the Bloomington Common Council and the Mayor's administration on policies and programs that enhance public safety for all community members.
- Promote a broader view of public safety through education and outreach programs.
